A Break for Nature

Michael Perez, Education Program Manager

Typically, the 2nd week of March means spring break for students. At the Fort Worth Nature Center & Refuge, however, there is no break. Nature and staff are always ready to welcome nature-loving visitors. This year will be no different. Join us for a diverse menu of programs and activities. Our wildlife ambassadors will be available for up-close interactions. Learn about reptiles and mammals and carve out some afternoon artistic time with reptile- and mammal-themed crafts. Hop on our hayride and travel with us to the bison range to assist in feeding the herd treats while learning about their natural history. If you are interested in being near the water, come out for some canoeing and kayaking; we provide the gear! Grab a net and catch macroinvertebrates found in the river. The trails will be ready for nature enthusiasts to search for wildlife. You’ll probably see a white-tailed deer or hear a bird chorus while hiking. Not only will the wildlife be in view, so will early wildflowers. Treat your eyes to the vibrant colors and your nose to the sweet aromas of blooming flowers.

Bring your family out for a break from the routine and experience new and natural things at the Fort Worth Nature Center & Refuge. We are confident your visit will be memorable for the entire family.
